

At several different points in our section of dance, we all come together but then break apart to be independent. We start in the beginning all as one, helping serve a common purpose. We then break off into smaller groups, and each group does a different strand. They vary greatly, but we all come together at the end to lift someone up, like a community does when someone is down.