

I personally really liked the idea of splitting up the three solos at the beginning. The concept of starting and stopping and throwing the energy between us seems really cool and it's something I'd definitely like to explore. I also think we could incorporate more dance-y movements rather than everything being pedestrian after the little duet. I think with further work we can really get the story across better.